The Agroforestry Training Academy is an intensive educational program designed for agriculture and natural resources professionals & farmers to gain an in-depth understanding of agroforestry practices, design concepts, species selection and management, economics and marketing, and more.

The Center for Agroforestry has been hosting the Academy since 2013; the growing cohort of trained Academy alumni create a network of peer support for agroforestry on-the-ground.

The 2022 Agroforestry Academy will take place both as a 5-week online course designed to be accessible for working people and parents, with an additional 3-day in-person field experience component at the Center for Agroforestry in Mid-Missouri to complement the online coursework.

Those who complete the online course are eligible to attend the in-person field component, but participants may choose to attend only the online course in 2022.

For more information visit https://centerforagroforestry.org/landowners/the-agroforestry-academy/ or contact Caroline Todd at ToddCS@missouri.edu